Dominici, Unwilling Volunteer

I was barely ten years old Taken from my bed in the dark and the cold From the other room I heard my mother scream I wasnt quite sure if it was real or a dream They said listen boy youre a soldier now Like it or not this is how its going to be

Its hard to know Who is the enemy? I search my soul

Months went by in the desert sea Where holy men were training me Pushed like a pawn in some great plan I soon found myself in a foreign land They said Blend in well, youre a sleeper now. Youll be contacted soon with the why and how.

I want to know Who is the enemy? I search my soul

I think about my family every day The look on their faces as I was dragged away I was an unwilling volunteer Never told why they sent me here

I need to know Who is the enemy? I search my soul
