

Donna Lewis, Lay Me Down

In this dark corner there is light understanding what lies beyond is not to be afraid but to look forward to another life full of light and colour happy at last

Nothing left to hide away nothing left to shield me fallen words on ocean clay no shout will ever reach me nothing but the vacant eyes rising up above me body torn spirit whole no knife can ever reach me

Lay me down
cover me now
while the nightingales sleep
under my feet
cover me now
while the white water flows
over me

Run across the hidden joy deliver me from evil rushing words in silent zones here are my people I am the child borna again where beauty stands and waits I am the child who loves and palys I am the angel who waits

and I will lie here with my unfinished words lay me down to rest
lay me where the nightingales sleep

down - cover me now
