

Donna Lewis, Lights Of Life

Remains lay smoking crawling little by little I can hardly breathe unprotected exposed to the numbing conditions I feel no pain

falling in the snow dazed and confused paralysed with fear huddled together for warmth in the trees where are the lights where is help only the silence .

oh oh help me .

still the sky was empty freezing fog descended and the snow begins to fall silence was an enemy more hated than the cold so we whispered stories to help us forget .

then out of the sky came the lights two tiny lights I wanted to kiss the earth and the stars no cruel mirage a distant visage the silence had broken out of the sky came the lights out of the night out of the fear came the strength strength to live out of the sky came the lights lights of life out of the fear came the strength strength to live out of the sky came the lights lights of life .

"It was my birthday the day they found me now I am one week old my life from this moment begins again" .

out of the sky came the lights out of the night out of the fear came the strength strength to live, live to love
out of the sky came the lights lights of life out of the fear came the strength strength to live, live to love strength to live, live to love out of the sky came the lights lights of life out of the fear came the strength strength to live out of the sky came the lights lights of life out of the fear came the strength strength to live out of the sky came the lights
