Donna Lewis, Nowhere To Run

I can still remember each mile I have travelled never knowing which way the road might turn now I face the stillness the city of ruins everyone in line waiting too blackened are the hearts of those who have witnessed far into the blue

out of view colours of the dawn shrouded completely everyday is slow sinking low

nowhere to run nowhere to hide and I stood inside the silent circle with a bitter taste of changing times and as the voices run run into each other did you feel the way God kissed our eyes

nowhere to run nowhere to hide

there is always time for us to begin again I don't want to sleep and see a face I once knew but I have a father who is still living and I have a mother who's with me too

nowhere to run nowhere to hide