

Doug Stone, Faith In Me, Faith In You

A single mother with two children make lunches in the mornin
And on her way to work, she drops em off at school
And tells them, faith in me, faith in you
A farmer kneels in his fields with dust pourin through his fingers
Says Im gonna lose you if it dont rain real soon
He looks up and says, faith in me, faith in you

[CHORUS]

Oh! Oh! I have to have faith
Thats where it all starts
I know I have to have faith in myself
Its feelin thats found right here in my heart
And when I think about things and all the dreams I wanna see come true
Let me tell you just what I do
I take a look in the mirror and I smile and say have faith in me, faith in you.

In the shadow of the city, by the banks of the river
From the doorway of his cardboard room
A man cries out, faith in me, faith in you
Your form of poverty and prejudice over hunger and pain
Over social injustice, just watch as the bosses rein
Here em saying, faith in me, faith in you

[REPEAT CHORUS]

I take a look in the mirror and I smile and say have faith in me faith in you.
