

Dwight Yoakam, Nothing's Changed Here

I hear you walking
Across the floor
I think that I'm dreaming
Till I hear shut the door
I wake up crying
Calling your name
Nothing's changed here without you
I start every day the same

Same old sun comes up to shine
On this old bed at the same old time
I tell myself the same old lies
I got you off my mind

I feel your body
Lying next to mine
I reach out in the darkness
But your not there for me to find
There's only sorrow
Followed by pain
Nothing's changed here without you
I start every day the same

I see your sweet lips
Softly kiss me goodbye
I taste the salt of my teardrops
As they fall down from my eyes
I take a deep breath
But it's only in vain
Nothing's changed here without you
I start every day the same

Yeah, nothing's changed here without you
I start every day the same
