Eddie Reader, Kiteflyer's Hill

Do you remember when we used to go up to

Kiteflyer's hill?

Those summer nights so still

With all of the city beneath us

And all of our lives ahead

Before cruel and foolish words

Were cruelly and foolishly said

Sometimes I think of you and then I go up to

Kiteflyer's hill

Wrapped up against the winter chill

And somewhere in the city beneath me

You lie asleep in your bed

And I wonder if ever just briefly

Do I creep in your dreams now and then?

Where are you now?

My wild summer love

Where are you now?

Do you think of me sometimes

And do you ever make that climb up to kiteflyer's hill?

I pray one day you will

We won't say a word, we won't need them

Sometimes silence is best

We'll just stand in the still of the evening

And whisper farewell to lonlieness

Where are you now?

My wild summer love

Where are you now?

Do you think of me sometimes?

Have the years been kind?

And do you think of me sometimes?

Where are you now?

My wild summer love

Where are you now?

Do you think of me sometimes

And do you ever make that climb up to kiteflyer's hill?

Kiteflyer's.....
