Edie Brickell, Tomorrow Comes

Sleepy eyes It's time to rise It must be well past afternoon

I know you Got a wonderful view I am familiar with the ceiling

But when tomorrow comes You'll be stepping out that door But when tomorrow comes You'll be stepping out that door for sure

Don't feel bad The love that you had Just goes to prove that you are able

I know you Got a terrible view I am familiar with the feeling

But when tomorrow comes You'll be stepping out that door But when tomorrow comes You'll be stepping out that door for sure for sure for sure

Not too far From where you are Red leaves are floating from Sebastian

Every day They fall away Bright green is coming back in fashion

And when tomorrow comes You'll be stepping out that door But when tomorrow comes You'll be stepping out that door

Tomorrow comes You'll be stepping out that door And when tomorrow comes You'll be stepping out that door
