

Eleanor Mcevoy, Seasoned Love

I felt anticipation early in the spring
I looked forward to the riches it would bring
I smiled the day it led my heart to you
It seemed like the world was smiling too

We laughed and drank and sang in summertime
I felt your body always close to mine
Our love was so exciting and so new
It seemed like the world was laughing too

Things got colder when the autumn came along
But we straightened out the things that had gone wrong
As the leaves displayed their ever changing hue
It seemed like the world was changing too

The winter brought the rain and then the snow
And I cried out loud the day I saw you go
I didn't really know quite what to do
It seemed like the world was crying too

I felt happiness inside when you were near I'd feel a surge of tenderness when you'd appear
I feel so messed up now that I'm not with you
It seems like the world is messed up too