

Electric Soft Parade, Appropriate Ending

Something hit a nerve in me, shook me like a busy theory Believed in you for all these years, never saw a time that we'd be backing out of foreign towns we're definitely up the wrong tree And picking off the innocent all the while you couldn't see

We gave you the world; you're unhappy
Still you don't listen to me
Must be I said the words a little too fast
Or the fact that our opposites are polar

Sparks are flying day and night if only cause we're out of favour A time will come around again, friend and then we'll be right back where it started with another me shaking like busy theory Believing you for all these years and never with a need to worry

We gave you the world; you're unhappy
Still you don't listen to me
Must be I said the words a little too fast
Or the fact that our opposites are polar

You threw away the world now you're happy And you're always talking to me Must be said that my world's a little smaller but for now, there is colour in my corner of it