

Eleventeen, Feels So Good

Well I just got a slap on the face as you turn your back and walk away
And I want to see the difference that you claim you can make It's like finding diamonds down under the ocean floor they were never meant to shine
It trying to change my life when you don't want to change yours
I just can figure this out

Doesn't it make you want to stay it feels so damn good Running in circles all through my veins I just can't figure it out

With all these wishes for perfect people with perfect dreams
I want to make you happy but you are so hard to please Who gave you this right to swing open doors that were meant to stay shut
Who gave you this right to come destroy everything
I just can figure this out

Doesn't it make you want to stay it feels so damn good Running in circles all through my veins I just can't figure this out

But I feel alright my body working my mind is stirring I won't be coming back again
