

Eleventeen, These Scars

And I want to forget all I've seen,
And all the pain that's been placed before me
And I try to think of better days,
but I'm still scarred from your mistakes
And all I want is some sunshine on my life,
And all I want is someone to be my superhero,
And fly me away

And I can still remember that angry look in your eyes,
That smirk on your face, clenched fist hit home
And I wish I could forget that angry look in your eyes,
That smirk on your face

Can somebody hear this?

And all I want is someone to be my superhero,
Someone to take my hand and fly me away
And all I want is someone to erase my memory
Someone to embrace me,
Am I asking too much?
I've never felt security
I guess I have no luck
Is there anyone?
Could you be the one? Yeah.

And I want to forget all I've seen,
And all the pain that's been placed before me
And I try to think of better days,
but I'm still scarred from your mistakes

And I can still remember that angry look in your eyes,
That smirk on your face, clenched fist hit home
And I wish I could forget that angry look in your eyes,
That smirk on your face

And I wish I could forget that angry look in your eyes,
That smirk on your face
I wish I could forget that angry look in your eyes,
And I wish I could forget that angry look in your eyes
