Elvis Presley, You'll Think Of Me

(Mort Shuman)

I'm sorry now girl, but I must leave you There's something deep inside my soul keeps calling me The winter wind girl, will not deceive you And in your cold and empty bed, you'll think of me, oh yes You'll think of me

You'll see me coming, you'll see me going Don't ask me why, I'm just the kind needs to be free Just like that outlaw wind keeps on a-blowin' Yeah, in your cold and empty bed, you'll think of me, oh yes You'll think of me

Now I know you loved me just like I wanted I know you'd follow me across an endless sea But baby I've got a heart that's haunted Yeah, in your cold and empty bed, you'll think of me, oh yes You'll think of me

Ah but you should know girl that I'll be crying
Out on that lonely road where not a soul can see
I'll shed my tears for a love that's dying
Yeah, in your cold and empty bed, you'll think of me, oh yes
You'll think of me

The summer sun girl will bring a stranger And he'll be better to you than I used to be And when he takes you into his arms girl Well, in your warm and loving bed, you won't think of me, no, no You won't think of me

Then in your warm and loving bed, you won't think of me, no, no You won't think of me
