

Embrace Today, Without You

Without you my heart aches, but for one night the world stood still.
Alone. Collected in a quiet way.
The burden of self doubt goes up in flames.
As the sunset bounced off darkened clouds.
A peaceful memory grows that life goes on without you.
There you were in my arms, staring into my eyes,
I want to hold you and let you die.
Regrets painted across star filled skies.
Never knowing when our time would end.
As the moonlight shines on hollow eyes.
A frightful image grows.
Life goes on without you.
And there you were in my arms.
Staring into my eyes.
I want to hold you and let you die.
Your everything I ever wanted,
and now I'll watch you slowly die... and life goes on without you.