

Emilie Autumn, Excerpts From The Upcoming Bo

And when I looked out I saw that we were heading fast upon a series of iron gates set in stone, wide
So paralysed was I by the sight before me, I did not notice that we had already driven past the first
With each turn of the wheels that brought me closer to the last gate, I tried harder to drown out the
I felt dizzy, and much too warm. The wind screamed around the carriage, the wheels rattled, and th
Looking out, I swore I saw, though I did not believe my eyes at the time, a great pack of rodents, pe
It was all so ghastly, so intoxicating, my body convulsed in a quivering wave, somewhere between