

Ensiferum, Warrior Without a War

Only change is unavoidable,
A brave new chapter is getting closer [again],
Without a shroud of doubt he walked,
The road, so long, one dream, now gone.

What are you more afraid to find,
Something to live or something to die for?
In the end, how will you fall?
As a hero or a warrior without a war?

Why you withhold the pain but need those scars?
How will you leave to the unknown shores?
As a hero of a warrior without a war?

The one who is now forgotten,
Carries the weight of a mountain,
No one can see how solemn,
Is the burden of the fallen.

Memories, ruthless like old guilt,
Choices, accept or be haunted [sine die],
No past, no future means a thing,
The very moment is all there is.

What are you more afraid to find,
Something to live or something to die for?
In the end, how will you fall?
As a hero or a warrior without a war?

Is it courage to let go or drown with a sword?
How will you face your final dawn?
As a hero or a warrior without a war?

The one who is now forgotten,
Carries the weight of a mountain,
No one can see how solemn,
Is the burden of the fallen.