

Epicure, Life Senence

Epicure - Life Sentence

she would forgive the truth if you left her with a smile like you used to do

she would bring the cups to you just to make you stay a while as if you wanted to

so lie down, sleep around what's bending now will break your light shattering my calm
a life sentence in your arms breath in now, breath out a toxic it suffocates sirens wailing in alarm

a life sentence in your arms

his own reads like a prison cell wall scratching days down as they pass not recalling them all his thoughts they twist and turn investing everything in her and not expecting a return will that be good enough for her

so lie down, sleep around whats bending now will break
your light shattering my calm
a life sentence in your arms

breath in now, breath out a toxic it suffocates
sirens wailing in alarm
a life sentence in your arms

so lie down, sleep around whats bending now will break
your light shattering my calm
a life sentence in your arms

breath in now, breath out a toxic it suffocates
sirens wailing in alarm
a life sentence in your arms

--not 100% i'm sure, but a rough idea.