

Erik Faber, Century(Correct)

Tell me, what did you wear?
Innocence and red, well, I really don't care
How it's all been easy, and why you're not lonely
I didn't need to know how he gets you loud

I stumble through the fire on my own
Burns a little more now, the seasons are gone
Centurys spent together, back to back
Someone give me more now
I need this to last
In the beat of the hour

Sweetness, the bubble did burst
Maybe for the better that I knew first
Given all the secrets you had to find
Well, everyone's got needs, but what about mine?

I stumble through the fire on my own
Burns a little more now, the seasons are gone
Centurys spent together, back to back
Someone give me more now
I need this to last

Somehow I'm failing in this war
A little advise won't help at all
You know I'm failing in this war
This little lie won't mend my soul

I stumble through the fire all alone
Burns a little more now, the seasons are gone
I have wasted centuries always, but in my own sweet time
I stumble through the fire
Sweet, sweet fire
Sweet