

Eskimo Joe, New York

Hey hey, I know it wasn't New York.
Where I lost my mind.

Hey hey, I know I must have left it.
It was back home all the time,
and where were you while we lay so drunk that we died.

Hey hey, I know, but who could blame us,
under pressure.

And I know,
I should stayed in bed

Hey hey, I know its just a toothache,
I won't even cry.

Hey hey, the candy store prescriptions
All lined up in the aisles
And where were you while we lay
Shipwrecked in denial

Hey hey, its just a pill to help you
Sleep right through the night

I should have stayed in bed
And I know
I should have stayed in bed
I know I should have stayed in bed

Because tomorrow's gonna be another party
You stay too long until the lights get lonely
Oh tomorrow's gonna be another party
Wait too long til we all stay out of the sun, sun

I know, I know, it wasn't New York