

Evangelista, Paper Kitten Claw

Every time you see the word never you must cross it out.
Read to me the questions the answers write them in your arm.
Let me copy off you let me write it all on your skin just like paper it don't matter. You can see thru trees trees can see you in skin in time in formaldehyde or lyme.

In a disaster they found you unfurled and your shirt up your neck and your chest paper-smooth with secrets that would never be told. Paper never lived like an arachnid did.
Every time you see the word never you must cross it out.

Hatching and falling and hatching and falling and hatching...most people walk right through me leave their scent but that's all.
Something thicker is sticking...paper kitten claw paper rule of law paper wedding dress paper printing press paper sleeping bag paper boy in drag paper antler hat paper sleepy cat paper skeletor paper oven door paper cherry pit paper full of shit.

Every time you see the word never you must cross it out.
