

Evergreen Terrace, The Damned

It's ok, it's ok, it's ok we've seen enough. staring straight, staring straight, straight into the setting sun.
let the light burn our retinas and our callused skin all you will have is anger and the money you cash in wishing to contact, but contracts put us out you can fool us once but we won't be the same again desperately seeking the fallen (the fallen) the damaged, and the weakened, and the used how can you see where you're going (you're going) when all these burning bridges block your view we know what you want we know what you need crawling up from the bottom of the list you have fooled us once but now things have changed this song will play your death (x6) on and on we go without you