

Everything But The Girl, Each And Everyone

If you ever feel the time to drop me a loving line maybe you should just think twice I don't wait around on your advice
You tell me I can go this far, but no more Try to show me heaven and then slam the door
You offer shelter at a price much too dear
And your kind of love's the kind that soon disappears

So don't brag how you have changed

And everything's been rearranged
I thought all that was over and done
But I still get the same from Each and Everyone Being kind is just a way to keep me under your thumb and I can cry because that's something we've always done you tell me I'm free of the past now and all those lies then offer me the same thing in a different guise