Exodus [Thrash Metal], Shudder to think

You hit rock bottom, now where do you go from here Sunk-down, locked-up, all you do is disappear All your promises areall just a pack of lies Your've got nothing, something you can't recognize Why don't you take some responsibility You're pointing fingers and blaming everybody Shudder to think if I lived like you They would be shaking too, if they only knew I can't take any more excuses No longer needed and you don't have any uses Washed up, washed out, what more can I say You better start filling out your resume Why don't you take some responsibility You're pointing fingers and blaming everybody Shudder to think if I lived like you They would be shaking too, if they only knew Everything was there for the taking Too Busy with the lying and faking Drugged up, fell out, too many second chances Nothing else to do under the circumstances Why don't you take some responsibility You're pointing fingers and blaming everybody Shudder to think if I lived like you They would be shaking too, if they only knew
