Face To Face, Everythins Your Fault

Have you heard them talk about it? You say they're wrong but they know all about it Have you tried another story? We're tired of all the lies and allegories Every single thing's your fault There you are not really jaded You've learned to live being underrated But they don't know just what you're made of Because of them who knows how you will end up? With you it's always something When everyone's the same Don't you try to blame me
