

Fat Amy, Break The Ease

(R.J. Johnson/Guiney/Reedy)

Quiets her mouth with his eyes

Burning as they fade

she whispers, "Please just try to keep good thoughts of me"

As everybody passed her by, he's the only one who waited and she never blamed herself for trying

And what's the difference anyway, Indifferent is the only way they ever seemed to be decides for him... and it seems so... complicated

As he does with everything he casts a glance so defiant

she lay her hands upon his face and now he can't help thinking

I am not as thankful as I ought to be Faced this Before... she's wasted once again

feeling Violet burn with every inch of me

Faced this before... and Violet won't give in she's so afraid she'll break the ease

Now she quiets her mouth

She waits to hear him breathing

You know we're all too proud she never knows what to do when she always thinks he's leaving

Faced this Before... it's wasted once again

feeling Violet burn with every inch of me

Faced this Before... she's wasted once again

Violet always comes to steal a piece of me you know we're all too proud... it's complicated...

now it's just so loud... she never wants to feel the pain of breaking off... and Violet's wish will break the ease and now we've Faced this Before... it's wasted once again

feeling Violet burn with every inch of me

Faced this Before... and Violet won't give in

She never thought she'd break the ease