

Filip Rudan, The Outside

Stared outside her window sill
Her reflection hit my eye as she touched my skin
I felt as though some things were left unspoken
Better watch yourself before you take a step

Through my aching heart
While it thinks about you
I've been afraid to talk
Cause it's always been true

I would bring you outside if I could
Tell you places I've seen and been through
And I would let you walk my heart if you could
I would bring you outside if I could

Stared outside her window sill
Her reflection touched my skin as I kissed her lips
The wind in your hair the image in the water reminded me of a scent of someone else

Feels like paradise when I'm walking with you
Everything's written in your eyes
Like you always knew

That I would bring you outside if I could
Tell you places I've seen and been through
And I would let you walk my heart if you could
I would bring you outside if I could
