

First Call, The Look

(written by Wayne Berry, Geoffrey Thurman, and Becky Thurman)

The inward beauty of the heart
Comes from the joy of the spirit
Those who know God's peace reflect God's love
Love is a very special mark
Touching anyone who comes near it
A living gift of God sent down from above

CHORUS:

What shows through when He looks at you
Depends on what's inside
If you light up with the light of love
The darkness will hide
Some will try to sell you the lie
That the world looks good on you
But if you're clothed in His righteousness
His holiness comes shining through the look
The inward beauty of the heart
Flows from a meek, gentle spirit
The look deep in your eyes reveals God's grace
The spirit is setting you apart
When He speaks to your heart you can hear it
And the wonder of His love is on your face
What shows through when He looks at you
Depends on what's inside
If you light up with the light of love
The darkness will hide
Some will try to sell you the lie
That the world looks good on you
But if you're clothed in His righteousness
His holiness comes shining through the look
