

Flesh Field, Inside

Everything explodes from the inside,
Saturating all of me and you.
Everything within the chapel dies,
And everything that you believed in, too.

Godlike steel,
I can feel your pain.

Siding with the enemy of hope.
Tearing down the walls of fantasy.
I can't hear the words that he had spoken.
Tearing down this frail reality.

I see the light of day burning through my eyes.
I stare anyway, severing my ties.
