

Flogging Molly, Tomorrow Comes A Day Too Soon

You! You never looked so good
Sippin' life down like I wish I could
But these sober tears are all that's left to shed
Sank his soul now made of lead

Face down beneath the rubble lies a man
Tells of a future already in the past
And of himself well he hasn't much to say
But wake the Gods; It's judgment day

He said I left my home where the dead never rose
For the streets of gold I've yet to find
And at the end of the day all you can do is pray
Without hope, well you might as well be blind...
yeah be blind
Tomorrow comes a day too soon

Angel, sweet angel of my youth
Where have you gone you flew away too soon
This brick I built now builds a higher wall
See it crumble hear me fall
There hangs the fool who once had it all

He said I left my home where the dead never rose
For the streets of gold I've yet to find
And at the end of the day all you can do is pray
Without hope, well you might as well be blind...
yeah be blind
Tomorrow comes a day too soon

And though the road has yet to rise
On these hundred years that pass me by
And the blood with the river flows
Through the crimson field never sewn, No never sewn

He said I left my home where the dead never rose
For the streets of gold I've yet to find
And at the end of the day all you can do is pray
Without hope, well you might as well be blind...
yeah be blind
Tomorrow comes a day too soon

Well you, you never looked so good
