

For Amusement Only, Amy

She closes swollen eyes and tries to think
Of a time when things were different
Time brings change for the better so they say
But for her things will always stay the same

They always stayed the same
They always stayed the same

Can you see?
Can you feel that there's someone in there
Never know, never try to
What is worse you just don't care

Can't you see that what you say
Affects the way she behave
Turn your eyes upon yourself
Don't look to blame your life on someone else

The faces change but the feelings never do
The yearning need of love distorted and confused
Blinded by the truth by her guilty shame
Trapped in a world that offers no escape

Can there be another way
Can there be another way

Can you see?
Can you feel that there's someone in there
Never know, never try to
What is worse you just don't care

Can't you see that what you say
Affects the way she behave
Turn your eyes upon yourself
Don't look to blame your life on someone else

World around us lies and tells us
Everything will be alright, denial
The weight of those that some must bare
While others stare, getting them nowhere