

Fra Lippo Lippi, Beauty And Madness

over there, just beneath the moon there's a man with a burden to keep.
now sleep will fall washout rags n' paper bags.
homes and lives passing by.

who will see the beauty in your life?
who will see the madness in your life?
and who will be there to catch you if you fall?

now dreams run wild, as lovers find their way through the night, not a care in the world.
and over there, over the twinkling of the lights harbor lights, say goodnight one more time.

who will see the beauty in you life?
