Funeral, When Light Will Dawn

Time to depart and breaking the seal Pour red wine and the softest of lips Oh, wish me well and I go

Tower your strength, an ascendance to hell Cut me deep with your ignorance and leave me be

I scorn my pityful self do not cherish my mistakes

Your fury rules at hand within when light will dawn and sun will fade Darker than the darkest night what burning lust you radiate

Carry me, into the fields In roses lay, Souls are now eternal sealed

From my cup, you quenched your thirst, I'm bathing in misery, you gave your first
