The frozen houses on the street The fading sound of footsteps
A person is being deprived of all of their light
And sepia colored memories that were imprinted on my eyelids (1)
Are now on the other side of the soft light...

Both paradise And the earth's anger vanish
Like a lost child bearing atonements, I don't even know where I'm going

In the unreaching shout, what should I believe in...
If I fall deeply, before these outstretched arms I see you

Both paradise And the earth's memory vanish
Like a lost child bearing atonements, I don't even know where I'm going

In the unreaching prayer, what should I ask for...
If I fall with you, only the crimes of evaded words disappear

In the unreaching shout, what should I believe in...
If we fall deeply, before these vanishing arms you smile
