

Gary Allan, Watching Airplanes

Sittin Out here on the hood of this truck looking up at a caramel colored sunset sky checkin my watch doin the math in my head counting back words to when you said goodbye well those runway lights are gettin brighter

Im just sittin' out here watching airplanes take off and fly
tryin to figure out which one you might be on and why you dont love me anymore right now im sittin' out here watching airplanes

I would've lied could've cried should've tried harder done anything to make you stay I wonder what you'd do if you looked out your window saw me runnin down the runway just like i was crazy that fence is too high so am i so I'm just sittin' out here watching airplanes

take off and fly
and why you don't love me anymore by now I know you're thirty thousand feet above me but a million miles away, a million miles away by now I know I outta act like you don't love me but im just sittin' out here watching airplanes

take off and fly
take off and fly
and why you don't love me anymore

yeah im just sittin' out here watching airplanes go bye, bye, bye
im just sittin' out here watching airplanes
baby bye, bye, bye
