

George Morgan, Back Again

We started out together chasing dreams of things to be
But we got seperated and you slipped away from me
The road you chosed to travel was the road of shame and sin
And every time you changed your mind I'd take you back again

You're back again there's no regret this time I don't want you
The love you thought would be here yet belongs to someone new I'll never face another night alone and wonderin' when
I'll hear a knock upon the door and you'll be back again

[steel]

For oh so long I've been the fool who kept forgiving you
While in my heart I always knew you never would be true
If you've been laughin' up your sleep this time the joke's on you
Cause while you have been foolin' round I found somebody new

You're back again there's no regret...
I'll hear a knock upon the door and you'll be back again