

Glenn Hughes, Into the Void

Narration:

in this ever-changing world we live in dangerous times when you're standing on the ledge there's no time to think it over is this the last time that you will question my faith this is the season of the crimson sky I can remember the look upon your face I can recall that moment in time

I tell you, my brother, fame is a dangerous thing I can see thru' you, you're flesh and blood let's say goodbye to the past it's a long time gone now I have fallen on sacred ground you run against the wind you hear the starting gun now don't you turn away now look what you have done

Chorus:

if you wanna make that move
get into the void
if you're searching for the truth
get into the void

I see the future
I hear it calling my name Look back in anger
I still feel the pain it brings back memories from space and time this is the year of the newborn child

get into the void
get into the void
if you're looking for a thrill
get into the void
if you wanna break your will

the rivers have all dried up the locust's in the sky you better think it over so give it one more try

if you wanna make that move...

I can remember,
remember
