

Glenn Kaiser Band, Northbound

I thought I'd seen an angel
I should have looked away But your honey-blond hair and your sweet blue eyes were all you had to say When a man is lonely he sometimes drops his guard
I should have seen the headlights I always lost at cards

They said you'd come from Rosedale
They said you'd had a fall I'd just cleaned up had an empty cup after wailin' at the wall
You smiled and reached
You didn't preach
But you took me where I'd been God knows how I could have missed the sting of another sin Then came the fight in the moonless night
I had to quit the pain
So tonight I'm headin' northbound on a southbound train Northbound / goin' northbound

The sun is risin' slowly as we reach the city's edge It seems like it was years ago standin' on that ledge Today I walk on water in a gentle fallin' rain She took all I never had but my Savior took my shame Sometimes it takes misery to connect my heart and brain

So tonight I'm headin' northbound
Oh, northbound / goin' northbound
