

Graham Nash, Lost Another One

just another morning cup of tea i turn my radio on and in between the static and the headlines i heard that you were gone we lost another one there was a time we thought we were invincible that wed go on and on and on and all along wed thought wed do another show and write another song but i guess weve lost another one let it slip away breaking all the silver threads that hold you to your dreams one day theyll fall and youll fly away after all the trouble and heartache we all go out alone no body else can live your life for you your in it on your own and you just lost another one we let it slip away(yes we did)
breaking all the silver threads that hold you to your dreams
one day theyll fall and youll fly away
i lost alot of friends on this highway so long everyone i watched them all sailing to the distance like a setting sun theyd only just begun and we just lost another one
we lost another one
