

Grey Holiday, Let Go

I've been holding on, to things like dreams that never seem to die
And I'm not so strong, to lay them down and say my goodbyes
How do you say goodbye?

If there's a remedy, a break from all my vanity
Then I'm gonna need your help
If there's hope for me, pull me down to my knees
Where I'm begging for your help
To let go, to let go

It's so unnatural to let all that I've planned just slip away
But i would be a fool, to tighten up my hands and be afraid
What i need is faith

If there's a remedy, a break from all my vanity
Then I'm gonna need your help
If there's hope for me, pull me down to my knees
Where I'm begging for your help
To let go, to let go

I'm walking right up to the edge
I'm bringing everything that's left of me
I'll throw myself into your love
You'll be the one to lift me up again, as I let go

If there's a remedy, a break from all my vanity
Then I'm gonna need your help
If there's hope for me, pull me down to my knees
Where I'm begging for your help
To let go, to let go
To let go, to let go
