

Hank Williams Jr., Just Another Town

This is just another town that I painted
You're just another girl that were not too well equated
I'm a drifter at this time and we parted oh but why am I so heavy hearted
It's just another town on the highway
Just like a thousand others I passed her goin' my way
I just came to say goodbye why do I wanna cry after all it's just another town
That's just another door why can't I open it and go
If I told you what's in my heart I'm sure that you'd say no
It's just another town that won't miss me
You're just another girl that was kind enough to kiss me
My mind says walk away why does my heart say stay
After all it's just another town after all it's just another town
