

Hank Williams Jr., My Son Calls Another Man Da

Tonight my head is bowed in sorrow I can't keep the tears from my eyes
My son calls another man daddy the right to his love I've been denied
My son calls another man daddy he'll never know my name nor my face
God only knows how it hurts me for another to be in my place

Each night I lay there in prison I pictured a future so bright
For he was the one ray of sunshine that shone through the darkness of night
Today his mother shares a new love she just couldn't stand my disgrace
My son calls another man daddy and longs for a love he can't replace
My son calls another man daddy...
