Hawksley Workman, No Stillness And No Rain

Remember your heart The darkest assassination Remember your purer times And think of your joy And arch of your inspiration Stop saying "how lost am I?"

And if I cried it just might take forever No stillness and no rain The thought of loving you is gone No stillness and no rain

You're not in control You could just die tomorrow And particles of your light Would emanate on To some cold and distant planet And you would be wiser still

Who won't let go? Who wants to make us still?