Hawksley Workman, The City Is A Drag

It's killing us.
The city is a drag.
My heart's broke down and in the dirt
I feel like I'm dying slow and sure
The city is a drag

So hide your passions in between The daily grind and broken dreams No some will tell you toughen up But this old life is all you got How much insanity can anyone take? It's burning down

It's big and shiny and improved With no room left for me to move Prostrate to this unending grind Sure you'll make a lot of money But you'll never make time
