

Holly Conlan, Without you here

And softly like a wild bird in flight
I feel you land like a whisper at my feet
And I can't get you off my mind tonight
And it's like an empty tune with a vacant beat
The road keeps on losing it's aim
Just as I never cease to lose myself
And I know that I won't be the same
Until I store you up high upon some shelf
Softly by the brightest moon at night
I can feel you breathing like a tide in my ear
And I cannot lose this little ray of light
Cuz I know it's just too dark without you here
And softly like a dream amidst the day
You come in and you lose my track
And for as far as I've gotten away
It's so quickly brought me right on back
Softly by the brightest moon at night
I can feel you breathing like a tide in my ear
And I cannot lose this little ray of light
Cuz I know it's just too dark without you here
Because now as you speak
I smile on inside
With the kind of weak
So unable to hide
And this restless night
Was simply not abide the things that I'm trying to lose
Oh all the things I let myself use
In order to forget you
In order to forget you
Softly by the brightest moon at night
I can feel you breathing like a tide in my ear
And I cannot lose this little ray of light
Cuz I know it's just too dark without you here
Without you here