Honor Society, The Takeover

Last night I was dreamin about us

We were sittin down by the lake

We were close I had my arms around you

Out of the corner of my eye your hair color changed

You pulled me in we started kissin'

But it felt much different felt like I was sinnin'

I realized it wasn't you but the scariest part

Was deep down in my heart

I didn't want to wake up

My heart's in a battle

I'm not sure I can win

I'm losing control of my love

I should've been a stronger man

Should've been your soldier

But I chose to wave my white flag

And let her takeover now

I should've protected our love

It happened about a month ago

I was at a coffee shop saw this cutie there

She was reading a magazine

Out of the corner of my eye saw her look at me

We started talking innocently

She asked if I was single then I felt a little guilty

Right then you called

But I hit ignore, never did that before

I didn't wanna pick up

My heart's in a battle

I'm not sure I can win

I'm losing control of my love

I should've been a stronger man

Should've been your soldier

But I chose to wave my white flag

And let her takeover now

I should've protected our love

I never planned to have an interest in someone else

I only think of you

you're the girl that gave me something I never felt

I tried to stay true

I'm fightin to keep you first in my mind, I don't wanna lose you

I don't wanna lose you.

I should've been a stronger man

Should've been your soldier

But I chose to wave my white flag

And let her takeover now

I should've protected our love

I should've protected our love

I should've protected our love

I should've protected our love
