

Ian Dury And The Blockheads, Back To Blighty

when faced with a hinderance the brave mountainier turns and walks back into the wind but my hesitation
in strange hemisphere makes me quit before I begin

intrepid explorer
his reason extremes
persues the unkno we perefect aplone behaves like a trooper
who brags and blasphemes
tell the truth, I wanna go home

back to blighty
back to blighty
back to blighty
back to blighty

the poor navagator
the siren that calls
he's not a warning of coming distressed although you're a chamer
the prospect appals
going back to my former address

back to blighty
back to blighty
back to blighty

there is a green hill far away....
