Idlewild, These Are Just Years

i thought home is where we went when we fell out of favour ive since learned that home is where we go to learn what favours are home is a language we all understand and this is how the language came to me i realise
home is where we dont feel things fortune has arranged that the language wont abandon us it never will abandon us if you dont miss your home i cant remember much about my home when im away from...

home, where were welcome we appear to be like you the were welcome when we appear to be alike

living in fiction
just seems much better than living in words
if you live in fiction
homes no match for a word ever existence

the more you go on the same as before the more you light up the same as this time the more you sing
all your songs about all your...

living in fiction
is much more better than living in words
if you live in fiction
homes much better than words

living in fiction
just seems much better than living in words
if you live in fiction
then homes no better than words im in fiction (x6)

and what i see it seems so standard it always seems that youre left stranded (x6)

why dont you look beond the village wall?
look beyond the village wall weve got four walls at home got four walls at home and these walls around your head thats what they are theyre walls around your head an empty head is creative and direct me
to where you come from and what you thought you knew where you come from

(I absolutely have no opinion of . . . home!)

home is the most overused word (x4) love is the most overused word just are the most overused words picture this the most overused word you are the most overused word i leave the most overused word i thank the most overused word musics the most overused word time is the most overused word this is the most overused word moments the most overused word

moments the most overused word
the most overused word
the most overused word
but not as much as home
and where you come from
but not as much as home
and where you come from
not as much as home
nothing tells you so much more than home