

Insomnium, Black Waters

Somber is my mind, now that
Misfortune has faced my kind;
Weary glazed stare, Beneath the Pitch-black hair.

On my cheeks, once so live, Adorn
Flood of tears, caused by strife
And as I grieve under the sky, even
Raven croaks to me it's despise
My warm hand against your cold
Palm...

Words echoing in the air through
You're gone...

Somber is my mind, Black is the Colour I feel

These completely dead emotions,
Drain the last bit of me

No matter how many tiers I shed,
No matter how much I repent

Some things just can't be undone
And some of us can't be forgiven.

No matter how many tears I shed,
Some this can't be undone...

I've reached the point of the no return,
These are deeds from I can not flee
From a reflection I see a tired man,
Longin for a relief

The Black waters in front of me
Will sway me till I'm in sleep,
Carry me to the shores of Manala
Where I'll be free from my sins.

The Black waters will sway me till I'm sleep...
This Roaring stream will wash me
Pure and clean...
