Jack Greene, Next In Line

See her there at the table watch her tare at the label
From the bottle that she's just drank dry
In her mind there's a burning it took a long time that she's learning
I just look at the teardrops she's cried
Everybody knows I love her but her mind is on another
And just look what he's done to her pride
And if she should change her mind give up the music and the wine
I'll be standing by to be the next in line

I know her favorite song so well and she's happy I can tell Just as long as she can hear the jukebox play So I'll keep play it out loud I'll spend every dime out To keep her happy in my own kind of way Everybody knows I love her...
