

Jack Greene, Wanting You But Never Having You

(Wanting you but never having you will soon destroy what's left of my mind)
I know that you're another man's possession
And it's wrong to steal the key that fits his door
I know it's wrong to play in raging water, but my weaken will won't let me find find the shore.

Wanting you but never having you
How much longer can I stand it?
Where does patience draw the line?
Wanting you but never having you
Will soon destroy what's left of my mind

I can't help it if my selfish heart desires you
I can't help it if I stare with hungry eyes
Each time that you come near me passion kindles,
And the fires inside start burning me alive.
Wanting you but never having you...